Name of Faculty:Faculty of Humanities and LawName of Department/Centre:Centre for Juridical StudiesCourse Name:LL.M.

General information about Course:

- Considering present mandates for interdisciplinary approach in teaching, research and learning in higher education, the course structure of the Master Of Law Programme (Two Year)under CBCS mode is redesigned to transform spirit of the same in to concrete achievements . Besides Law and its supplementary branches, approaches have been made to critically deal with potential contemporary theories, dynamics of socio-legal developments with historical objectivity , skills on report writing, media work, dimensions of conflict resolutions and to shape outcome based learning by infusing teaching and research skills among learners for enrichment of liberal intellectual values.
- Generic elective papers have been suggested to implant effects of transdisciplinary learning in focused manner, along with skill enhancement course under the CBCS framework. Hence research project / writing concept note/seminar & presentation will be integral component of each course with scope for participatory learning. The art of framing research question(s), structuring research design, cultivation of analytical and interpretative skills will also be developed through such presentations. Students will be encouraged to make presentations by using ICT / power point and other digital mode to keep pace with situational dynamics and requirements of learning skills to communicate and adapt. Progress of the students will be continuously assessed throughout the semester by their attendance, participation on interactive sessions during class lectures, tutorials, presentations, submission of assignments on given topics from the syllabus. Internal and End Semester exam may consist of long and short essay type questions from the approved syllabus, class room lectures, discussions and any other reading materials.
